

Description of Scholarship

Jeff Zimpleman was born and raised in Iowa. He grew up in Clive and graduated from Valley High School in West Des Moines. He went on to attend Dartmouth College, where he earned a degree in chemistry, did graduate work at the Scripps Research Institute in La Jolla, California, and received an MBA from Cornell University in Ithaca, New York.

Throughout his life, Jeff loved to travel and valued the opportunities to learn that it provided. He traveled widely and often, and in his 36 years he visited 30 countries; studied business in Spain; saw 6 of the 7 continents; and ventured above the Arctic Circle. Traveling always provided chances to meet new people and experience new cultures, whether in the classroom or out, and he relished these opportunities.

When he visited a country he followed some simple rules: first, learn as much of the language as he could; second, stay in places that would take him into the heart of the cities and countries that he visited; third, spend time with locals. While Jeff loved to travel to broaden his own horizons, he also sought to take his roots with him: to bring those values of respect, consideration, and education that he learned in Iowa to the people and places he visited.

Jeff Zimpleman passed away at an early age. This scholarship honors his memory by sharing his love of traveling and learning and by challenging students to study international affairs, as well as to attend conferences and symposiums that will help them to make a difference in our broader international community.

Iowa Sister States is proud to partner with the family of Jeff Zimpleman in the creation of this scholarship. Jeff's love of exploring new places and his understanding of the importance of nurturing international relationships resonates with the very essence of Iowa Sister States' organizational vision which is to, "...be a leader in integrating Iowans with the world community." Iowan Jeff Zimpleman, a citizen diplomat, did just that: he integrated himself into the world community. With this scholarship we offer you the same opportunity.
